Above: The models in front of Grey Hare Inn, a bed and breakfast on Traverse City's Old Mission Peninsula. Owners Jay and Cindy Ruzak host 15 to 20 honeymoon couples a year as well as members of the wedding parties. In conjunction with the inn, the Ruzaks grow cherries, vegetables and have a charter sailboat. They also grow grapes, which are processed by their neighbors, Peninsula Cellars, for wine that is used at the Grey Hare Inn.

Above, Shirley Mouser, owner of Premier Flowers in Traverse City, often disguises a bouquet's water source with a satin wrap, as with this bouquet of hydrangeas and Eskimo roses. Though beautiful, she says that hydrangeas can present a challenge: their colors are determined by soil acidity and moisture, so their hues can change from season to season. Below, the San Dominico two button black coat is by After Six.
